Two men indicted for reentering the United States after deportation

CONCORD, NH—United States Attorney Tom Colantuono and Bruce M. Foucart, special agent-in-charge of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) report that a federal Grand Jury has indicted James Kamau, 35 years old, and Jesus Carrillo-Perez, 30 years old, for reentering the United States after having been deported to their respective home countries of Kenya and Mexico.

Kamau is charged with re-entering and being illegally present in the United States after he was deported on or about June 18, 2004. He was arrested in Dover, New Hampshire by Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents on July 19, 2006.

Carrillo-Perez, who is also known as “Miguel Galaviz-Rentarias,” is charged with re-entering and being illegally present in the United States after he was deported on or about April 19, 2000. Carrillo-Perez was also arrested on July 19, 2006 by Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents after he was found in Manchester, New Hampshire.

Both men were arraigned this afternoon at the U.S. District Courthouse in Concord and were ordered detained pending their trials. Kamau’s trial is scheduled for Oct. 3, 2006 and Carrillo-Perez’s trial is scheduled for Oct. 17, 2006.

These cases were investigated by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement of the Department of Homeland Security and are being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney Mark S. Zuckerman.

An indictment is only an allegation and not proof of criminal conduct. As in all criminal cases, the defendant is presumed innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.
